The Frick Collection has created a named position for its director. Ian Wardropper and future directors will henceforth be known as the Anna-Maria and Stephen Kellen Director, a designation that honors the parents of Marina Kellen French, a longtime patron of the Frick. She and her family members are stewards of the Anna-Maria and Stephen Kellen Foundation, a not-for-profit organization that supports both cultural and healthcare-related institutions. Comments Elizabeth Eveillard, Chair of the Frick's Board of Trustees, "We extend our gratitude to Marina Kellen French and her family's foundation for the generous gift that inspired this named position. It gives us great pleasure to acknowledge such a steadfast and significant commitment in this very meaningful and permanent way." Adds Ian Wardropper, "I first met Anna-Maria and Stephen Kellen in 2002 during my tenure at

The Metropolitan Museum of Art, and I greatly admired their keen interest in and support of the Met's European decorative arts program. Over the years, I've had the privilege of getting to know Marina Kellen French, particularly since I came to The Frick Collection. I feel honored that the my title of "Anna-Maria and Stephen Kellen Director" will pay tribute to this distinguished family, whose philanthropy has done so much to support art and culture in New York and abroad."

ABOUT THE ANNA-MARIA AND STEPHEN KELLEN FOUNDATION

The gift was directed to the Frick by Marina Kellen French, in honor of her parents, Anna-Maria and Stephen Kellen, now deceased. Stephen M. Kellen was the longtime president and CEO of Arnhold and S. Bleichroeder Inc., an international investment firm re-established in New York in 1937 by his father-in-law, Hans Arnhold, today known as First Eagle Investment Management LLC. Mr. Kellen founded the Anna-Maria and Stephen Kellen Foundation in New York City in 1983. The Hans Arnhold family villa on the Wannsee in Berlin, where Mr. Kellen met his wife, Anna-Maria (née Arnhold), is now the American Academy in Berlin, for which the Foundation gave the founding grant in 1994. The Foundation has supported The Metropolitan Museum of Art, National Gallery of Art, Carnegie Hall (where Mr. Kellen was a trustee), WNET Channel 13 (Great Performances), free admission at MoMA PS1, among others. The foundation has also made gifts to the Animal Medical Center, the Mayo Clinic, Weill Cornell Medical College, the Hospital for Special Surgery and Columbia Business School.
