With this fall presentation, visitors have an opportunity to examine John Constable's (1776 - 1837) method of working out changes in composition and atmosphere between two paintings as they observe the subtle differences between a nearly completed, full-scale oil study by the artist and a finished work. Constable's Salisbury Cathedral: Two Versions Reunited is the next in a series of presentations that pairs together a major loan from another institution with a related work at The Frick Collection. Juxtaposed will be The Metropolitan Museum of Art's Salisbury Cathedral from the Bishop's Grounds (c. 1824-25) and The Frick Collection's Salisbury Cathedral from the Bishop's Garden (1826). The paintings will be on view from September 21 through December 31, 1999 in the Library of The Frick Collection and are accompanied by an illustrated brochure written by Associate Curator Susan Grace Galassi. The presentation is supported, in part, by the Fellows of The Frick Collection.

In a sense, the pairing also commemorates the complex relationship between Constable and his "kind monitor for 25 years", his friend and patron Bishop John Fisher. The bishop and his nephew Archdeacon John Fisher were among his most faithful supporters, offering him accommodation for lengthy stays in Salisbury, painting supplies, and a liberal amount of advice. During numerous visits to Salisbury between 1811 and 1829, Constable made drawings and oil sketches of the magnificent thirteenth-century Gothic cathedral from different points of view under varying weather conditions, some of which were developed into finished paintings.

In a group of six paintings dating from 1820 to 1826, he depicted the cathedral from the south side, rising above a green meadow. The bishop asked the painter to develop one of the resulting works, a sketch of 1820, into a finished painting. Instead, Constable set out afresh, producing a canvas that he exhibited to critical acclaim at the Royal Academy in 1823. The bishop, however, was troubled by a storm cloud around the cathedral's spire, and a year later asked Constable for alterations. Working from the outline of the 1823 canvas, Constable completed the commission with the two paintings on view in this presentation. Unfortunately, the bishop, who died in 1825, did not live to see the Frick painting, with its serene sky, completed.

ABOUT THE FRICK COLLECTION

The Frick Collection features masterpieces of Western art from the early Renaissance through the late nineteenth century. Important works by Bellini, El Greco, Rembrandt, Titian, Turner, Vermeer, Whistler, and many others are housed in one of the great mansions remaining from the Gilded Age. These paintings are complemented by one of the world’s finest collections of Renaissance bronzes and by French sculpture of the eighteenth century, in addition to outstanding furniture and decorative art works from the ateliers of Riesener, Lacroix, Boulle, Carlin, Gouthière, and Sèvres. Each year more than 250,000 visitors from New York, across America, and around the world come to the Collection at 1 East 70th Street, once the residence of Henry Clay Frick (1849-1919). Designed by Thomas Hastings of Carrère and Hastings and constructed in 1913-1914, the building was changed after Mrs. Frick’s death in 1931, with alterations and additions made by the architect John Russell Pope. In 1935 the Collection opened to the public. A new Reception Hall, built in 1977, was designed by John Barrington Bayley, Harry van Dyke, and G. Frederick Poehler, as well as two temporary exhibition galleries. The Frick Collection also operates the Frick Art Reference Library at 10 East 71st Street, both a research library and a photoarchive. The Library is one of the world’s great repositories for the documentation and study of Western art and has served the international art world for more than seventy-five years.
