FRICK OFFERS FREE ADMISSION ON THURSDAY, DECEMBER 16, 2010 TO MARK ITS 75th ANNIVERSARY AS A PUBLIC MUSEUM

Seventy-five years ago, members of the public took their first look at the museum known as The Frick Collection. The exact anniversary of that opening day will be marked this year with free admission on Thursday, December 16, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. In 1935, journalists wrote of the graceful mansion-turned-museum as a “legacy of beauty” where the quality of its collection was “unsurpassed anywhere.” Decades later, it remains one of New York City’s cultural treasures, drawing approximately 275,000 visitors annually to see masterpieces by Bellini, Fragonard, Gainsborough, Goya, El Greco, Holbein, Houdon, Ingres, Rembrandt, Renoir, Turner, Vermeer, Whistler, and others, as well as related special exhibitions, education programs, and concerts. Anniversary celebrations in 2010 have included a summertime display of archival architectural drawings, lectures and other education programs, anniversary-themed member events, and the debut of a new orientation film.

The free day in December is the culmination of these activities and will feature access to the permanent collection and special exhibition galleries, the opportunity to view never-publicly-shown Frick archival footage, as well as a full day of 75th-anniversary-related gallery talks. ABOUT THE FRICK COLLECTION

Henry Clay Frick (1849-1919), the coke and steel industrialist, philanthropist, and art collector, left his residence on 70th Street and his remarkable collection of Western paintings, sculpture, and decorative arts to the public “for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a gallery of art, [and] of encouraging and developing the study of fine arts and of advancing the general knowledge of kindred subjects.” Designed and built for Mr. Frick in 1913 and 1914 by Thomas Hastings of Carrère and Hastings, the mansion provides a grand domestic setting reminiscent of the noble houses of Europe for the masterworks from the Renaissance through the nineteenth century that it contains. Also part of the institution is the Frick Art Reference Library, founded in 1920 by Helen Clay Frick as a memorial to her father. The mission of the Library was, and remains, to make available to a broad community of researchers materials for the study of art in the Western tradition from the fourth to the mid-twentieth century. The Library (located on the same block as the museum, but with its entrance on 71st Street) also celebrates a 75th anniversary in 2010, having moved into the present building in 1935.
